INSTINCTIVE DREAD,

Children's Knowledge of Criminals Tested With Portraits.

The knowledge of a criminal physical production of the common people, asys Lombrosse, in the savants, is often instinctive among the common people, asys Lombrosse, in the savants, is often instinctive among the common people, asys Lombrosse, in the Forum. There are often persons, especially among women, who are so far from suspecting even the existence of criminal character of a malefactor.

I was acquainted with one lady whose life was quite withdrawn from society, who, on two occasions, discovered the criminal character of certain young people, not before suspected, but afterward detected by the police. How often we read in the reports of trials of perfectly honest people, unfamiliar with the slightest anthropology, and who yellow people, not before suspected, but afterward detected by the police. How often we read in the reports of trials of perfectly honest people, unfamiliar with the slightest anthropological observations, who escape certain death from being warned in time by the sinister glance of the assassia. In which they read his criminal intention. It was in this way that the first letter carrier who was to have been the victim of the murderer Francesconi had time to flee, haunted by that glance.

At my request schoolmasters have shown to forty young girls twenty portraits of thiceves and twenty of great men. Four fifths of these children recognized the murderer Francesconi bad time to flee, hand they young girls twenty yo public is contented because it has no mean-public is contented because it has no meaning.

Isospectifiat the phenomenon is bereditary. The impression left us by our fathers and transmitted to our children has become unconscious knowledge, like that of the little birds born and reared in our bouses, who strike their wings and beaks in fright against their cage when they see press above them birds of prey known only to their ancestors. Each day teaches us the importance of the unconscious part in human actions and what a role is played by atavism and heredity. Who of us can realize when he bends the knees and joins the hands in prayer that he is making a bereditary movement transmitted from those epochs of barbarism when war was the normal state?

Fell From the Window While Walking in His Sleep.

HIS SKULL CRUSHED TO PULP

Deputy Coroner Glazebrook Satisfied That the Deceased Had No Intention to Take His Own Life-Divorce Proceedings Instituted by His Wife on Account of His Drinking Habits.

Mr. Frederick A. Cushman, who lived at Mrs. Mary W. De Maine's, 708 Tenth street northwest, met a terrible death yesterday morning by falling from a third story window of that building, the fall having produced instant death, as his head was crushed in and disfigured aimost head was crushed in and disfigured aimost beyond recognition. A colored man who was passing the spot yesterday morning about 4 o'clock, discovered the body of the dead man near the iron railing enclosing the little garden in front of the house. It is supposed that in the fall Mr. Cushman's head struck first on the iron railing of the front door stairway and was thence hurled to the position in which he was found.

The colored man promptly reported the fact to Mr. Martin Cronin, whom he met near the De Maine house, and they returned and aroused the lamates. Dr. Phoebe R. Norris, who lives in the house, was summoned, but the man had long been dead, and was beyond human aid. HIS IDENTITY DISCLOSED. Investigation showed that the dead man was Fred Cushman, the well-known steward, who had acted in that capacity recently at the Eismere, and formerly at Hartford, Conn., of which State he was a native. He married Miss Annie T. Saffeli, of this city, about cleven years ago, and there is now pending a suit for divorce, instituted by Mrs. Cushman. It is said that efforts for reconciliation have been made by Mr. Cushman, to which Mrs. Cushman was ready to accede on condition of the reform ready to accede on condition of the reform of her husband.

Mr. Cushman went to his lodgings at about 11 o'clock Monday night, staggering upstairs, according to the account of Mrs. De Maine At about 3:39 a. m., Mrs. De Maine and several of the boarders heard a noise outside, and from that circumstance it is supposed that Mr. Cushman fell about that time.

The body was removed to Speare's un-dertaking establishment by friends of the Deputy Coroner Giazebrook made a thorough examination of the case, the result of which disposes of the suggestion of suicide. He found that Cushman struck on his head, and no evidences whatever of suicide. Cushman had made some engagements to be fulfilled Thursday, which fact Dr. Glazebrook concluded did not warrant the assumption of a premeditated death. WALKED IN HIS SLEEP.

Engines Were a Trifle Late.

Fire was discovered at 3:97 o'clock yesterday morning in the wood and coal yard of C. B. Payne, corner of Seventeenth and D streets northwest. Some delay was made in turning in an alarm, and the flames had made great headway before the engines arrived. The rear fencing, several woodsheds and a stable were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $1,000, fully covered by insurance.

Deputy Coroner Glazebrook made a

WALKED IN HIS SLEEP.

Mr. Cushman has been a hard drinker and has been suffering from insomnia. The most interesting discovery is that Mr. Cushman was a somnambulist, and that the window sill of the room he occupied is very near the floor. The most natural theory, therefore, is that he walked to the window and fell out with the terrible results noted. Before going to bed he had removed only his coat. He probably flung himself on the bed hurriedly, if he was drunk and staggered upstairs, as stated by Mrs. De Maine.

In this condition the window probable remained open and walking in his sleep the accident was not only possible, but probable. It is also to be noted that Cushman left no letter or writing explaining a premediated act as is usual in
